BEAUTIPULIN HER OLD AGE.—At the last Saturday evening "rennion" Grace Greenwood, in her immitable way, gave as dramatic readings in costume. Her personations exceeding anything the writer has seen on the stage or in private life. Charlotte Cushman, Fannie Kimble, Scott Siddons, last, but not least, our own Grace Greenwood, make all the stars of the first magnitude that we have now in this particular heavens of genius. Attorney-General Williams says, "that he looks upon Grace Greenwood as the best writer, and the most gifted woman in the country." This decision is legal, and may be considered final. Years ago the great and good Horace Mann said, but she was not only "the most gifted, but she was the most beautiful woman he had ever seen;" and his passion for her in youthful days was as pure as though she had been a disembodied spirit, it is so rare that beauty and genius as wedded to one soul. In the centers BEAUTIFULAN HER OLD AGE, -At the and may be considered final. Years ago budding green of April and the garnered glory of September. It her potrait was taken as she stands before us to-day, and hang in the Corcoran gallery, the spectater would say "this must be a Roman matron who lived before the pall of Middie Ages darkened the carth." How does she look?—a brunette of the purest does she look?—a brunctle of the purest type, with clear-cut features, sorrowful, inquiring eyes, that shine as though a quenchies flame burned somewhere in the solitude of her own soul. There are some pictures which are burned into the human soul. We shall never forget her personation of Over the Hills to the Poor House, one of Carleton's poems. The poverty-stricken outfit, the worn out carpet bag, the ironbound spectacles, the gray hair. From the highest to the humblest of that goodly company scarce a dry except the second of the control of th a dry eye was to be seen. Then she told us what Miss Tattle, from Buttonville, saw at a Rejected Session of the Senate. This was followed by that which proves man to have been the only "created laughing animal."—(Philadeiphia Press.

Cnazy,-A Dublin merchant named Cnarr.—A Dublin merchant named Johnson was very hard on his cierks, and when the visitor left the store without a purchase he would discharge the clerk. He took up a position near the door, and as customers passed out, would inquire if they had been properly served. On one occasion a lady was negotiating with a clerk for a shawl, but the sale was not made. The clerk called the ladies attention to the old gentleman, who was, as usual, standing near the door, to waylay tention to the old gentleman, who was, as usual, standing near the door, to waylay the lady with the customary question. "That old man," said the clerk, "is crazy. He may attempt to stop you as you go out, and you had best avoid him, as he js sometimes dangerous." The lady started for the door, and as the old gentleman approached her gave a shriek and darted out. Johnson was greatly astonished, and, walking back to the clerk, asked: "Do you know that lady?" "No, sir," answered the clerk, "but I think she is crazy." "You are right," returned the old gentleman, "she must be crazy."
